

Sally Abed is a member of the national leadership and co-founder of Standing Together, the Jewish-Arab grassroots movement that mobilizes people around peace, equality and social justice. In February 2024 she was elected to Haifa's city council, the first Palestinian woman ever to lead a joint slate in Israel. She was also among the founders of a new Jewish-Palestinian political party called "A Place for Us All" and ran as a candidate on its slate.

Nadav Shofet is a member of Standing Together's national elected leadership and the director of its international department. Following October 7th, he helped found the Jewish-Arab solidarity guard in Tel Aviv-Yaffa. He has a background in community organizing.
